UPDATE: Updated Form ED-102 Will Allow for a 4-Year Approval For New Courses with Additional Delivery Methods

BEGINNING SEPTEMBER 25, 2020

- Discard all prior blank ED-102 Forms – ADRE will not accept the old version of the ED-102 application form.
- The new ED-102 Form (CE/DL/HR/OPCW) – The new ED-102 form must be used for all new course applications, with a course approval application and include an Addendum for each delivery method application being applied for. A new course number will be assigned with a four (4) year course expiration date (i.e. All course delivery methods, will be under the same course number). A course may have an approval for multiple delivery methods, depending on the Addenda attached to the application.
- Already approved, current Courses, where a new and/or additional delivery method is desired, can be submitted by completing the new ED-102, including the current course title and course number, and any additional delivery method addenda that were not included on the original course application approval. Upon ADRE approval, the current course number will remain and the course, course number, and all delivery methods will expire on the date stated in the original course approval. A new application will then be required, and a new course number will be assigned with a new four (4) year expiration date. Current approved courses cannot be renewed upon expiration.
